The Pope's Monument.
One of the most celebrated Roman sculptures has now almost completed the sepulchral monument for the pope, ordered by himself. It is of Carrara marble. On the cover of the sarcophagus lies a lion, with one paw on the papal tiara. On the right is the statue of Faith, holding in one hand the Holy Scriptures and in the other a torch. On the left is the statue of Truth, holding the arms of the pope. Under the lion, on the face of the tomb, is a Latin inscription in large block letters.—London

Kentucky Baptist says:
Haynesville.—Rev. J. N. Jarnagin, assisted by C. B. Phillips, closed a protracted meeting at Zion Baptist church on Thursday evening, Oct. 25, 1894. The meeting resulted in twenty-five additions to the church, seventeen by baptism. The church was greatly revived. Large congregations at night with good results are not to be measured by the additions; there are other things that are gratifying to the church and pastor. Our pastor, Bro. Jarnagin, did the preaching.
His sermons were plain, forcible and full of Gospel truth, and we believe the meeting will be a blessing to all who come under its influence. Bro.
Jarnagin's talk to the converts at the close of the meeting delighted the large audience present. Our beloved and greatly afflicted brother, Rev. J. S.
Taylor was with us and enjoyed the meeting. To God be all the Glory.

The Cipher Telegram Another of the good stories told at the expense of the "cipher telegram" of the modern business world came up the other day.
A city broker, whose home is in New Jersey, was obliged by illness to lose a day from his business, so he sent word to his clerk at the office to let him know by the telegram something of the day's transactions.
The hours were on but no telegram appeared and the broker began to be mystified, not to say provoked, at the unaccountable negligence of his faithful clerk. The telegram office was a mile from his home, and there was nothing to be done but to wait for the messenger, who didn't come.
Next morning the unhappy suburbanite stopped on his way to the station to make inquiries at the telegraph office for his missing telegram. The operator was an old town gossip, with an interest in everybody's affairs and greeted his visitor in a neighborly fashion.
"Good morning, sir! All well, I hope?"
"Yes, all right. I say, didn't you get a telegram for me yesterday?"
"Telegram for you? Let me see.
Why, yes; I believe I did. But I couldn't make nothing out of it, so I didn't think 'twas worth while to send it up!"—[N. Y. Tribune.

The Odds Too Great.
A good story is told on a prominent gentleman of this city who had on several occasions been a candidate before the people for official honors. The gentleman is a smart politician and knows how to secure votes, or, at all events, he has been successful at the polls. However, on one occasion the prominent gentleman admits to having met a smarter man. The latter approached him on election day with the statement that if he had some whisky he could vote a man for him. The candidate gave up half a dollar in compliance. Latter in the day, meeting the smarter man again, the candidate greeted him with:
"The Odds Too Great."

Farm and Garden Notes Put the poultry house in or near the orchard.
Don't try to make a cheap job of putting out the orchard.
Whatever kind of chickens you have give them thoughtful care.
It is pleasant to theorize with poultry, but practice pays best.
The poultry house should be ventilated day and night at all times.
When it rains sufficiently put out something for quickly made pasture.
Plant a plum thick for the chickens to run in. It will be good for both.
Arrange to raise some late chickens. They will make fine files in due season.
Always keep a flock of guineas to watch out for hawks and other intruders.
Shade is an important consideration for fowls of all ages and conditions just now.
Never buy stunted trees from the nursery, and then do not stunt them in the orchard.
Soap wash or lime wash is of great benefit in helping orchard trees to shed the old bark.
The breaking of spiders to milk should be done by very careful and level headed person.
You can raise good milk cows if you like, and thus save yourself the trouble of hunting them up.
Whistle for the cows when about them in place of the dogs and you will get more milk and butter.
It is not best to get garden truck to many years on the same ground.
It tends to invite disease.
Do not be so careless as to allow bees to get water from the horse and cattle trough. Take a small clean grocery box without a cover and set it in an empty live in the middle of apery. Keep water for the bees in it and if it leaks a little they will like it all the better.
It is recommended to dip the fingers in vasoline or a little grease just before starting to work among the bees, and the fingers will be kept clean of propolis, which at this time of the year has a way of sticking to everything. When going back to replenish the smoker dip the fingers again, and the stains will be kept off.
Kerosene emulsion can most easily be applied to destroy lice and prevent the attacks of the bony fly by using the sprayer mixtures to fruit trees.
A hand sprayer is most convenient, and with a nozzle a very small quantity will be sufficient, whereas by hand and sponge application the work will require much more liquid, and take much more time.

A DESPERATE REMEDY.
Scene: Mrs. Bertram's boudoir.
Mrs. Bertram. Enter, Miss Ayton.
Mrs. Bertram—Good morning,
dear.
Miss Ayton (kissing her)—I am so glad you are alone, I want you to advise me. I am in a terrible fix.
Mrs. Bertram (cheerfully)—Yes, dear; what is it?
Miss Ayton—I—
Mrs. Bertram—Come, Ethel, out with it, it can't be very dreadful.
Miss Ayton—Capt. D'Arcy—(pauses).
Mrs. Bertram—Proposed to you last night, I saw him—
Miss Ayton (blushing furiously)— Oh! how could you how horrid of you.
Mrs. Bertram (unabashed)—Leading you towards the conservatory with a sort of death or glory look on his face.
Miss Ayton (relieved)—Oh, was that all?
Mrs. Bertram—I don't know, was it?
Miss Ayton—He did propose.
Mrs. Bertram—Well, there is nothing very terrible in that; he is quite eligible, your father won't object, in fact, I congratulate—Miss Ayton—Don't; it isn't that.
Mrs. Bertram—Oh, then, I know; you said no, and now you want to say yes.
Miss Ayton—That would be quite easy; it is much worse than that.
Mrs. Bertram—Then what on earth is it?
Miss Ayton—Mr. Montegle.
(Pauses).
Mrs. Bertram—Took you down to supper, well?
Miss Ayton—He proposed, too.
Mrs. Bertram—They both proposed and you accepted the wrong one.
Miss Ayton—No. I accepted them both; at least, I didn't say no to either of them.
Mrs. Bertram—Then you must say no to one or both of them now; it is very simple.
Miss Ayton—It isn't at all simple,
it is very difficult.
Mrs. Bertram—Very difficult?
What is difficult?
Miss Ayton—To refuse one of them.
Mrs. Bertram—Goodness gracious, dear! You can't marry them both.
Miss Ayton—Of course not. I don't want to.
Mrs. Bertram—Then the question is, which?
Miss Ayton—Yes.
Mrs. Bertram—You are quite sure you don't like one of them better than the other.
Miss Ayton—I don't know. That is where the trouble is.
Mrs. Bertram—I am afraid I can't help you much, to me they seem so very much alike.
Miss Ayton—Oh, how can you say so; they are quite different.
Mrs. Bertram—Ah, yes, I forgot; one parts his hair in the middle, and the other doesn't.
Miss Ayton—I do wish you wouldn't go on like that; it's very unpleasant, when I want you to help me. If you knew them as well as I do, you would see at once that no two men ever were more unlike.
They are of quite distinct types.
Mrs. Bertram—Well, that ought to simplify matters considerably.
Surely you know which type you prefer?
Miss Ayton—Yes, yes, I do—in the abstract, of course—(pauses).
But somehow, in a husband, there are so many other things to consider. I want to take a practical view of the matter. Do help me!
Mrs. Bertram—Well, dear, by all means let us be practical. Let me see. Mr. Montegle must have quite one thousand pounds a year, and expectations, while Capt.
D'Arcy can only have four or five hundred besides his pay, till his—Miss Ayton—Don't be so horrid.
As if that mattered. What I want to know is, which of their temperaments is best suited to mine? Now, Capt. D'Arcy is very devoted to me, and all that, and I rather like him; but I am not sure that he is quite serious enough about things in general. He strikes me as being a little too easy-going; he never seems in earnest about anything.
Mrs. Bertram—Yet he looked very much in earnest last night.
Miss Ayton—Mr. Montegle has more depth of character, I think.
And he has such high ideals about women—life and, nh—things (vaguely).
Mrs. Bertram—Yes. Then accept him by all means.
Miss Ayton—Oh, but I'm not sure that he isn't too serious. Besides, I'm afraid he's rather a radical in some ways, and you know we have always been so conservative.
Mrs. Bertram—If you are going to take politics into consideration, I should advise you to marry Capt.
D'Arcy. I should think that he would adopt your views, whatever they are.
Miss Ayton—But I like a man to have some opinions of his own.
Mrs. Bertram (gawling)—Then, as I said before, marry Mr. Montegle.

HER PROGRESS.
The Traces Which France Has Imposed on Other Nations.
France has left traces of herself—physical traces, we may almost say, which cannot be effaced—in every nation of Continental Europe, and in every continent of the world; and her victories in art, in science and in letters are as widespread as the march of her arms has been, says London World. If other nations are not always as prompt in acknowledging this multifarious greatness as they might be, the reason perhaps is that France anticipates them in paying to herself the tributes which they would willingly pay to her, and that they can add nothing to her magnificent confessions of her own greatness except by slightly qualified echo of them. As regards the celebrations of last week, it is not necessary to look at them very critically.
A nation, as an individual, is wise which can now and then unbend into folly. It may be objected that France, in celebrating the centenary to the republic, was celebrating a century of her history of which two-thirds were spent under monarchies of one form or another, and one-third under republican institutions. It was on September 22, 1792, that the Abbe Gregoire proposed in the convention the abolition of royalty, the proclamation of the republic, and the discarding of the Christian calendar for a chronology dating from the year one of the republic, one and indivisible. I would seem as if the organizers of the fête had in part gone back to the new calendar, and substituted for the year 1892 Anno Domini the 100th year of the republic.

The removal of the cross from the Pantheon, in which the president and his ministers celebrated the day, was something in the spirit of the Abbe Gregoire's resolution. As the reign of Charles IX. began, according to official chronology, on the day of the execution of Charles I., and as in the royalist school books of France, Gen. Bonaparte was described as an eminent soldier who commanded the armies of Louis XVIII., so there are partisans of the divine right of the republic who consider it to have existed to date under the restoration, the monarchy suppressed. They ignore Bourbons and Bonapartes as completely as courtly history ignored the protectorate in England and the consulate and empire in France.

A Feline Somnambulist.
A somnambulist Angora cat is the strange possession of a Germantown family. The cat, which is a very valuable animal, developed a tendency a few months ago to walk abroad at night, a dissipation that had previously been entirely foreign to the nature of that most aristocratic feline. It would go out in the back yard and fraternize with disreputable Toms and Marrias that held nightly serenades there. Every effort of the family to keep the cat at home failed. One night about two weeks ago the man of the house watched the cat as it lay asleep on its dainty cushion in the parlor.
Suddenly the cat arose and started for the door. The man caught the animal and shook it roughly. The cat scrambled about and screamed as a human somnambulist would do, and afterward lay trembling violently. Several times since the cat has been caught in the same way, and each time showed conclusively that it was a sleep-walker.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Attention Teachers!

Superintendent Shultz has received the following letter:

FRANKFORT, KY., Nov. 1, 1894.

DEAR SIR:—On filing my warrant on yesterday, as required by law, the Treasurer assumed me that there was no money to the credit of the School Fund to make even the partial payment which the Treasurers and Superintendents of about two-thirds of the cities and counties tell me, in response to my letter of October 23rd, will be necessary to meet next week's demand upon them. While I am assured that both the November and December payments can easily be made before the second Saturday in December, the Treasurer cannot tell me positively whether he can pay any time next week what you call for; and, to avoid embarrassment, it will be best for you to notify your teachers not to expect it then.

I would have given you this positive information when I wrote before, but there was hope at the time that at least half of the 20 per cent. due could be paid this week. This would be sufficient this month, as the aggregate asked for less than half.

It is hardly necessary to say that I deeply regret this disappointment to you and your teachers, but, owing to operation of the revised Revenue law to which I alluded last week, it is unavoidable.

All arrears and full December payment may be confidently expected before December 8th. Yours truly, ED. PORTER THOMSON.

Teachers who have drawn for only one month may draw one month's pay next Saturday, November 10, but those who have drawn 40 per cent. will have to wait until December.

Z. H. SHULTZ, County Supt.

Mr. Homer Hampton, of Bowling Green, and Miss Matilda Carson, of No Creek neighborhood, will be united in the holy bonds of matrimony on the 14th of November at 4 p. m. Rev. R. P. Carson and Miss Cora Felix will act as groom's first man and bride's maid. The marriage will be solemnized at No Creek church, where Miss Carson has been a member of the church from her childhood with great credit to herself and much usefulness to society. We wish the young people all the happiness that human being is heir to, in this life and perfect felicity in that great beyond. Both the bride and groom are of the first class of society in their places of residence of rare accomplishments and we assure that they will be happy in their new relation. They will have the kindest wishes of many friends for their success in life. We trust that wherever their lot may be cast they will fill as large a sphere in society as they have here. We trust they will make this their future home. Rev. J. B. Perryman will pronounce the words that will make the two happy hearts beat as one.

Ringed Noise

In the ears, sometimes a roaring, buzzing sound, are caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and very common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also result from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great purifier, is a peculiarly successful remedy for this disease, which it cures by purifying the blood.

Hood's PILLS are the best after dinner pills, assist digestion, prevent constipation.

Danger From Catarrh.

The most important feature about that very common complaint, catarrh in the head, is its tendency to develop into some other more serious and dangerous disease. The foul matter dropping from the head into the bronchial tubes or lungs is very liable to lead to bronchitis or consumption, that destroyer which causes more deaths in this country than any other disease. As catarrh originates in impurities in the blood, local applications can do but little good. The common sense method of treatment is to purify the blood, and for this purpose there is no preparation superior to Hood's Sarsaparilla. The powerful action of this medicine upon the blood expels every impurity, and by so doing cures catarrh and gives health to the entire organism.

AN AMERICAN IN LONDON.

Ho Is Like a Bit of Sunshine Through the Fog and Rain.

A London "Scrubber" Writes of a Visit from Capt. Jack Crawford, the Well-Known Western Poet and Scout—A Reminiscence.

We are all in the nethermost hell of despair over our awful weather, and we are longing for the sunshine, writes George R. Sims in the London Referee. But there are people who in some parts of the world grumble at "sunshine above," and long for the fog and the rain of Old England. As I was thinking of these things there strode into my room, out of the mist and the rain of the park, Capt. Jack Crawford, the famous Poet Scout of America, the ideal frontiersman, with long hair hanging over his shoulders, tall, lithe and sunburnt, with eagle eyes and shading brows; and he sat himself down in my study, and, shaking the rain from his leonine locks, exclaimed: "I like this—it does me good." "Like what?" I asked. "The weather," he replied; and then he told me how for five long years in New Mexico they had not a drop of rain, only the eternal scorching, blinding sunshine, and how seventy-five per cent. of the cattle died, and the fish lay in the dry bed of the river and fanned themselves with their tails, and the snakes crawled about with their skins blistered and crackling; and he called the ceaseless downpour of Thursday "just a dream," and wished he could take a stock of our special summer weather back to New Mexico with him.

I told the genial frontiersman that I would pay him a visit in his land of sunshine as soon as I could settle my affairs in this sun-forsaken land of mud and mildew, and asked him if I should have to go about with six-shooters all over me. Then he laughed.

"There aren't any six-shooters now except in the boys' tales," he said. "The real men of the west are quiet, peaceable, good fellows."

But in the old days of the six-shooter the Poet Scout often had a rough time. One night in a rough town he had to meet Wild Will—James B. Hilscock—one of the greatest scouts America ever knew, a man who once killed seven men in five minutes. They were guerrillas during the war, and belonged to John McCardias' gang, and they got round Wild Will to murder him, and it was their lives or his life, and he accounted for seven on his own. On the occasion when Capt. Jack and Wild Will were in the bar, a frontier rough came in all over six-shooters, and yelled: "I'm a wolf, you thar, and I'm on the howl to-night. Up to the bar with you, and red liquor for the lot!"

The company obliged, and the red liquor—otherwise "taranteller poison," otherwise "whisky"—was served. But Wild Will and Capt. Jack sat still. "Here," said the stranger, "aren't you going to drink?" "No," replied Capt. Jack. "I've never had a drink in my life."

"Then, by thunder, you'll begin now." "Very well, then; I'll take a lemonade." "Lemonade be hanged! Red liquor, and down with it, or—"

And he drew his revolver. And then Wild Will rose, and with one blow of his huge fist stretched the frontier rough on the floor. And as he rose and put his hand to his six-shooter, a man came and exclaimed: "Wild Will, by heavens!" And the hand dropped, and the Wolf exclaimed: "My God! I thought there was only one man with a fist like that." And when Capt. Jack lifted his glass of lemonade the Wolf gave him a sickly smile, and when the captain said: "You've not ordered your own drink yet," he answered, hesitatingly: "No—I-I think I'll take a lemonade, too."

It was five o'clock in the afternoon when he came into my study just to bring me a message from my friend, Robert P. Porter, of census fame, and I shouldn't like to tell you what time it was when I let him out of my front door into the night, with his long hair waving in the breeze, and then went up to bed revelling the fate which had made me a melancholy London scribbler instead of a poet scout, with a ranch in New Mexico and a glorious record of gallant deeds on the frontier of the wild west.

Pretty Small Business.

It is said that the smallest piece of painting in the world has recently been executed by a Flemish artist. It is painted on the smooth side of a grain of common white corn and pictures a mill and a miller moulting a stairs with a sack of grain on his back. The mill is represented as standing on a terrace and near it is a horse and cart, while a group of several peasants is shown in the road near by. The picture is beautifully distinct, every object being flashed with microscopic fidelity, yet by careful measurement it is shown that the whole painting does not cover a surface of half an inch square.—N. O. Piesunne.

Houses for Trolley Wires.

Chemists, Saxony, has banished horses from her street cars and substituted the trolley. The method of stringing wires is by means of ornamental rosettes fastened into the woodwork or walls of houses, having projected hooks to which the wires are attached. These hooks are firmly fastened and are tested with seven times the weight they will be called upon to bear. Owners without exception preferred to allow the use of their houses free rather than have posts on the sidewalks.

KINDERHOOK.

Nov. 5.—Election is over and the Republicans have carried the county.

Mr. Late Easterday, wife and child spent Sunday in Kinderhook, and guest of Mr. A. C. Ellis and wife.

V. G. Barnett went to Centertown Sunday.

Mrs. Annie Smith, McHenry, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Bettie Foster, Sunday.

Luther Barnett, Owensboro, is visiting in Kinderhook at this writing.

We learn that J. A. Baird has purchased a farm down on Rough Creek and will move thereon soon. We regret very much to lose Mr. Baird and his pleasant wife, but our loss is another's gain.

Mrs. Jo. B. Rogers, who has been confined to her room for some time with typhoid fever, is, we are glad to state, able to be out again.

Miss Viola Lake has typhoid fever. R. A. Anderson is still confined to his room, but is improving slowly.

The school at Alexander, which is under the management of C. H. Ellis, is in a flourishing condition. On next Friday week he will have exercise by the pupils. Let the trustees and patrons come out on that day and see what your children are doing.

Mr. Commodore Lake is erecting a dwelling house just at the edge of the levee on the Owensboro and Hartford road. As soon as completed, his brother-in-law, Mr. Carden, will move therein.

Rev. I. H. Teel filled his regular appointment at Alexander schoolhouse Sunday evening. To say that Bro. Teel is a good christian man and only preaches from the Bible would be useless, for once having heard him you could not think otherwise of him. May he be instrumental in converting every sinner in this vicinity, is the constant prayer of
